

McMurtry Town Hall – 1/31/2012

SA:

- LPAP Discussion:
 - There were 700 people on LPAP waitlists and they want us to propose a change to the LPAP requirements
 - What was popular was the thought of increasing the LPAP requirements to only one class
- Food Rep:
 - They are changing the food rep positions to have monthly meetings and make it more involved and standardized

Beer Bike:

- There has been a lot of drama surrounding the theme, but our final theme is.... Ciroc Obama: Four More Beers!
- Brown backed down from the issue that we had with them about the tagline and we got it!

Elections:

- We have had the idea of possibly having a Presidential Debate rather than Presidential speeches, where we could ask them specific questions instead of having speeches where the candidate can talk about what they want
 - Open discussion:
 - Speeches might just focus on the strengths of a candidate while shying away from their weaknesses
 - Time is also an issue, because we already have trouble keeping everyone interested in the speeches
 - While this may be a good idea, at this short of notice this year then it might be best to just wait until next year to bring this up again, and continue with normal speeches this year.
 - If we are having a debate, should we make it happen at a more formal time than just during dinner?
- The general consensus is that we should just have speeches this year and keep a debate in the back of our mind until next year. However, a Q&A session might be happening.

Other:

- On Sunday we are going to drop the screen down and will be watching the Superbowl in the Commons with some wonderful snacks provided by Chef Roger
- College Women's volleyball and softball sign-ups due tonight
- The RHAs are holding a kindergarden study break on Thursday night in the TV Lounge
- Lisa is hosting an off-campus outing on Saturday where Matt Taylor, the associate dean of undergraduates, is taking us to his favorite art gallery and we will go out to eat lunch beforehand. We will leave here by 1 for lunch
- The McMurtry Girls College Soccer Team is playing this Saturday if any of you McLadies want to play. Talk to Erin Hartman if you are interested in playing.